SUN-TAVERN LUDGATE-STREET LONDON SEPT. 16th. 1767.

THE GENTLEMEN, CLERGY and FREEHOLDERS of the County of CUMBERLAND, residing in or near LONDON, met here this Day, pursuant to an Advertisement for that purpose, and took into consideration the Nomination made at WIGTON, on the 31st. of August last, of the CANDIDATES, to represent that County in PARLIAMENT, at the next GENERAL ELECTION; and most heartily concurred therein, and agreed to abide by the free choice of the said Meeting, and support the INTEREST of HENRY CURWEN and HENRY FLETCHER Esquires, with the utmost Firmness and Unanimity, being thoroughly convinced the Proceedings at WIGTON were truly constitutional, and by no means unusual, "nor calculated to deprive the FREEHOLDERS of their Privilege of ELECTING their REPRESENTATIVES, or tended to destroy their free Choice, nor was any Infringement upon their Liberty, or Innovation upon the County," but directly the contrary; and notwithstanding the low insinuation mentioned in an Advertisement in Yesterday's Public Advertiser, "That this Meeting ought not to be regarded, as it was calculated to mislead the FREEHOLDERS," yet the GENTLEMEN then present would have the Author of that Advertisement understand, that they are above being influenced by any Party to deceive their Countrymen, and that such a Subterfuge, to prevent so GENERAL a MEETING, met with the contempt it deserved.
